Roman Schramm took a photograph of two turtles. Stacked, then inserted in a space where images float above clean, reflective floors and cast artificial shadows. Heji Shin photographed a horse. Bangs. And big, dark, sleepy eyes. Like horses, cats are popular animals. Trevor Shimizu painted one that seems pretty happy. The moons in Lise Soskolne's paintings usually look happy too, or rather content, satisfied with being out there in space, framing a view of infinity and enjoying whatever company they have. Sergej Jensen has made drawings of dogs doing the kind of things that people do. Horses, a monkey, and a swan have also appeared in his work.
